

How to Stay Out of Trouble with DOL

Labor union officer elections and financial matters are subject to federal law, the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 (LMRDA). Within the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) is a small federal agency whose primary mission is to make sure that labor unions comply with the LMRDA. That agency is the Office of Labor-Management Standards (OLMS).

It is very likely that, at some point, you will be visited by an OLMS investigator. Wouldn't you like to know what to expect when that happens? BallotPoint Advisory Services offers training for union officers and employees to take the mystery out of the LMRDA and help you stay out of trouble with DOL.

This is what we will cover:

Recordkeeping and Reporting

- Tens Steps to Your Union's Financial Health
- Union Reporting and Recordkeeping Requirements
- Understanding the OLMS Compliance Audit Program

Elections

- Understanding LMRDA Election Requirements
- Handling Election Challenges
- Surviving an OLMS Election Investigation
- The Future Is Now: A Look at Remote Access Elections

Know what to expect . . .

Know the resources available to you!

BallotPoint
Advisory Services

www.ballotpoint.com
1-800-514-8810